

Special Issue

The Professional Learning of Teachers of Science

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue explores how professional development supports in-service teachers of science working with children of all ages and in jurisdictions around the world. In many jurisdictions, governments invest in professional learning initiatives for in-service teachers of science, while national, regional and local providers offer professional development within, between and outside schools [5]. Meanwhile, teachers increasingly engage online with informal and formal professional learning activities [6]

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

From its first issue in 2011, Education Sciences (ISSN 2227-7102) has grown as a scholarly international open access journal. Its aim remains to publish extended full-length research papers that have the scope to substantively address current issues in education. As a member of the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE), our goal has been to disseminate high quality research. Our publisher, MDPI, takes the responsibility to enforce a rigorous double-blind peer-review together with strict ethical policies and standards to ensure to add high quality scientific works to the field of scholarly publication.
