Application of Artificial Intelligence in the Health Field or Education

Message from the Guest Editor

Artificial intelligence (AI) has been making waves across various sectors, and the fields of health and education are no exception. The application of AI in these domains has opened up a plethora of opportunities, paving the way for innovative solutions and transformative practices. In this context, this Special Issue aims to delve into the latest research, trends, and applications of AI in health and education. We aim to discuss innovations in health diagnostics and treatment, personalized learning experiences, new educational management systems, and the evolving landscape of health and education in the era of AI. We welcome original research papers, specifically interested in empirical studies in health and education regarding the use of AI technologies, case studies about AI applications in these fields, new health and educational management systems leveraging AI, new evaluation techniques and tools, and best practices in AI for health and education.

We look forward to your valuable contributions and to the ongoing discourse on the transformative potential of AI in health and education.
