Advances in Information, Intelligence, Systems and Applications

Message from the Guest Editors

Information is widely available and accessible, but frequently leads to information overload and overexposure, and the effort for coding, storing, hiding, securing, transmitting, and retrieving it may be excessive. Intelligence is required to manage information and extract knowledge from it, inspired by biological and other paradigms. Information and multimedia systems are being developed, which incorporate these advances and demonstrate an increasing level of intelligence. As a result, new technologies, protocols, and novel applications are emerging. In turn, the novel applications lead to the collection of new information, with the information circle being repeated at ever higher levels. This SI will include works which cover a broad spectrum of topics, from both novelties in theory and advanced methodologies, to applications in the energy, agriculture, medicine, forensics, healthcare, education, tourism, inspection, traffic, transportation, and software engineering.
