

Special Issue

Development and Advances in Autonomous Driving Technology

Message from the Guest Editors

In recent years, automatic driving has developed rapidly and has gradually realized its industrial application potential. With the expansion of application scenarios and the increase in application scale, the challenges faced by automatic driving in complex scenarios also become prominent.

This Special Issue will publish the papers that reflect research and innovation in the area of autonomous driving in complex scenarios, which include, but are not limited to, the following main topics:

- vehicle-vehicle/vehicle-road collaborative perception
- vehicle-vehicle/vehicle-road collaborative decision and control
- intelligent perception and control methods in complex environments
- high precision mapping and positioning in complex environments
- acceleration tests and simulations for automatic driving
- end-to-end autonomous driving
