Electronics Application in Medicine & Health Care

Message from the Guest Editors

The rapid development of electronics applications in daily life has led to increasing demand for more powerful and sophisticated devices in hospitals, public health facilities, and even in home environments. The design of medical devices necessarily requires the expertise of both engineering and medical experts. This Special Issue will provide a platform for transdisciplinary researchers to work together and to present state-of-the-art developments of electronics in medicine and healthcare. The topics of interest include but are not limited to the following:

- Bioelectronics
- Biophotonics
- Medical imaging technology, bio-imaging
- Surgical technology
- Monitoring devices
- Respiration technology
- Drug delivery systems
- Artificial organs and biomaterials
- Tissue engineering, bio-inspired materials, and molecular and cellular methods
- Devices and instruments for rehabilitation
- Telemedicine, e-health, and mobile health
- Ambient-assisted living
- Smart sensors for digital health
- Artificial intelligence for Digital Health
