

Special Issue

International Finance and Energy Markets: Energy Supplying, Prices, Investments and Trends

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to delve into the intricate relationships between international finance and energy markets with geopolitical risk and climate risk. By focusing on cutting-edge research from leading experts in energy markets, we seek to explore how these multifaceted risks influence global energy dynamics and market stability. We anticipate contributions from leading researchers in the field of energy markets, offering empirical data, theoretical analyses, and policy recommendations. These contributions will provide valuable perspectives on how to navigate and anticipate risks in a rapidly evolving global landscape. This Special Issue represents a unique opportunity to advance the understanding of the interplay between geopolitical and climate risks in energy markets. We are confident that it will attract significant interest from both academia and industry, providing a comprehensive overview of current research and future directions. Keywords:

- international finance
- energy prices
- spillover effects
- clean energy
- green finance

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Energies is an international, open access journal in energy engineering and research. The journal publishes original papers, review articles, technical notes, and letters. Authors are encouraged to submit manuscripts which bridge the gaps between research, development and implementation. The journal provides a forum for information on research, innovation, and demonstration in the areas of energy conversion and conservation, the optimal use of energy resources, optimization of energy processes, mitigation of environmental pollutants, and sustainable energy systems.

Editor-in-Chief
