Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue intends to stress the importance of this subject area and the implications of the obtained results for environmental structure and function conservation, protection and restoration practice, specifically related to the aquatic animals. We welcome both classic and innovative valuable research approaches which aim to communicate recent advances in the aquatic biodiversity habitats, species, populations, associations, communities, biocoenosis, ecosystems, etc., from local to global, and from short- to long-term perspectives.

Aquatic animals, priceless natural resource builders of the humankind, are ecologic indicators of the state of the Blue Planet and an oracle of our common fate. The third millennium will have its own chance to keep us together alive or let the floating wonders survive and thrive and make us vanish.
