New Strategies in Production and Product Quality Control of Fresh Meat

Message from the Guest Editor

The meat sector has evolved during the last few decades to take advantage of new opportunities and address numerous challenges. International trade, niche markets, environmental impact, animal welfare, and human nutrition are only some of the many factors shaping the way we produce and market meat around the world. Moreover, quality assurance and classification systems are more important than ever, as buyers and consumers are becoming more exigent, and competition for the global market requires novel technologies which can meet such requirements. In this Special Issue of Foods, we will explore new strategies to be implemented in the meat sector, both at the production and quality control stages.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Foods (ISSN 2304-8158) is an open access and peer reviewed scientific journal that publishes original articles, critical reviews, case reports, and short communications on food science. Articles are released monthly online, with unlimited free access. Currently, Foods has been indexed by the Science Citation Index Expanded (SCIE - Web of Science), PubMed, and Scopus. Our aim is to encourage scientists, researchers, and other food professionals to publish their experimental and theoretical results as much detail as possible. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global food science community.
