Application of Innovative Technologies for Improving Food Quality and Safety

Message from the Guest Editor

Consumer demand for high-quality foods, which are nutritional, safe, and convenient, has led to interest in the use of innovative processing technologies. The introduction of these new technologies, such as nonthermal or alternative technologies, can also reduce processing time and improve industrial operating conditions, resulting in high-quality products that better preserve their fresh-like characteristics. The main purpose of this Special Issue, “Application of Innovative Technologies for Improving Food Quality and Safety”, is to provide high-quality manuscripts regarding the use of innovative technologies and discuss their impact on food nutritional quality, sensory aspects, safety, and other related factors.
