Microbiology Safety of Meat Products

Message from the Guest Editor

This special issue of Foods, entitled "Microbiological Safety of Meat Products", is intended to present both the historical developments in meat safety, as well as the current state of knowledge of the subject. Meat safety issues include parasites, bacteria and viruses, and each present unique concerns to public health. In response to these issues, the meat industry has developed a host of control mechanisms, beginning with live animal production and ending with the final preparation before consumption. In addition, regulatory agencies around the world have developed specific guidance for both domestically produced meat, as well as that in international commerce. This special issue of Foods invites manuscript which address all aspects of the microbiological safety of meats. Prof. Dr. Jim Dickson

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Foods (ISSN 2304-8158) is an open access and peer reviewed scientific journal that publishes original articles, critical reviews, case reports, and short communications on food science. Articles are released monthly online, with unlimited free access. Currently, Foods has been indexed by the Science Citation Index Expanded (SCIE - Web of Science), PubMed, and Scopus. Our aim is to encourage scientists, researchers, and other food professionals to publish their experimental and theoretical results as much detail as possible. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global food science community.
