Genetic Diversity, Seed Quality, and Tree Adaptation Under Environmental Stresses

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of Forests on “Genetic Diversity, Seed Quality, and Tree Adaptation Under Environmental Stresses” aims to showcase innovative, high-impact research that advances knowledge of forest genetics and adaptation. We welcome interdisciplinary contributions that integrate molecular genetics, genomics, seed biology, ecophysiology, and ecology to clarify the mechanisms underlying tree responses and adaptive processes under environmental stress. We invite the submission of original research articles and comprehensive reviews that contribute to the development of climate-resilient and genetically robust forest systems.
