

Special Issue

Woody Plant Phenology in a Changing Climate

Message from the Guest Editors

The issue aims to provide a platform for researchers working on woody plant phenology to publish their recent studies related to the effects of plant phenology and vegetation phenology in a changing climate. We will accept high-quality original research papers, full reviews and short communications. We welcome submissions related, but not limited to, the following topics:

- Relationships between woody plants phenology and climate factors or other drivers;
- Responses of vegetation phenology to climate change;
- Phenological mismatches between plant phenology and pollinators/seed dispersers;
- Influences of woody plants phenological changes on ecosystem structure and functions;
- Relationships between woody plants phenology and human society (agricultural activities, diseases and health issues (such as pollen allergies), tourism, etc.).

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Forests (ISSN 1999-4907) is an international and cross-disciplinary, scholarly forestry journal. The distinguished editorial board and refereeing process ensures the highest degree of scientific rigor and review of all published articles. Original research articles and timely reviews are released online, with unlimited free access. Our goal is to have Forests be recognized as one of the foremost publication outlets for high quality, leading edge research in this broad and diverse field. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global forestry community.
