Integrated Forestry Land Use Systems: Challenges and Benefits

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, "Integrated Forestry Land Use Systems: Challenges and Benefits" aims to explore the multi-dimensional challenges and benefits of managing forests within complex, integrated landscapes. As global environmental governance shifts towards holistic management, understanding the interplay between forest conservation, agricultural production, and coastal protection is crucial. We seek high-quality research that bridges the gap between ecological modeling and governance performance. We particularly encourage submissions that utilize innovative methodologies—such as scenario simulation, policy evaluation, and spatial intelligence to evaluate the effectiveness of policies like Territorial Spatial Planning and National Park Systems. Our goal is to provide a scientific and decision-making basis for sustainable forest.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Forests (ISSN 1999-4907) is an international and cross-disciplinary, scholarly forestry journal. The distinguished editorial board and refereeing process ensures the highest degree of scientific rigor and review of all published articles. Original research articles and timely reviews are released online, with unlimited free access. Our goal is to have Forests be recognized as one of the foremost publication outlets for high quality, leading edge research in this broad and diverse field. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global forestry community.
