Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue seeks to extend previous analyses by applying Sleeter's critical framework to family history as seen through the lens of migration. Taking inspiration from previous work on this topic, this Special Issue combines the genealogical research that characterises family history with critical social science scholarship, focussing on the lives of individual families to examine the structures, processes, and power relations inherent in societies shaped by narratives of migration. The central premise of this collection is that the process of discovering family history can be 'unsettling' (especially in colonial contexts); this is driven by and contingent upon the processes of dislocation, disruption and renewal – key components of the migratory experience.

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, ESCI (Web of Science), and many other databases.

Rapid Publication: manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 24.9 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 4.9 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the second half of 2023).
