

Special Issue

Haudenosaunee Language, Culture, and Communities in the 21st Century, and Beyond

Message from the Guest Editor

The focus of this Special Issue will be Haudenosaunee language and culture in the 21st century. I am hoping to pull together a variety of perspectives on the importance of our languages and oral traditions as they relate to Haudenosaunee communities today in the context of climate change, global conflict, and the future well-being of the onkwehonwe. This invite is to all interested participants—language teachers, learners, artists, community members, and academics. To the best of my knowledge, there is no recent collection of writings, by our people, that address our thoughts and concerns about the current state of our cultural health, communities, and/or global affairs. I am hoping that this Special Issue of Genealogy might be the start of an ongoing process of such a dialogue.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
