

Special Issue

Shifting Structural Power and Advancing Transformational Changes Among Black, Indigenous, and People of Color (BIPOC): Elevating the Voices of the Community

Message from the Guest Editors

For this Special Issue, we invite contributors from interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary backgrounds (e.g., social work, public health, sociology, psychology, Indigenous studies, critical Ethnic Studies, social sciences, language and history, education, humanities, etc.), including practitioners, artists, community members, and scholars, to share approaches, strategies and ways in which community has responded to the needs of the people. We wish to explore how communities have created transformative, empowering, and healing practices and how scholars and practitioners have facilitated elevation of community knowledge(s), voices, and wisdom in spaces/ places that historically excluded such communities. This Special Issue also aims to solicit approaches and strategies that may be relevant and useful on multiple ecological levels (e.g., micro/individual, meso/group/family, macro/policies/programs/organizations) that serve and facilitate change.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
