Contesting Power: Race, Ethnicity, and Self-Representations in Global Perspectives

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of Genealogy, entitled, “Contesting Power: Race, Ethnicity, and Self-Representations in Global Perspectives”, will focus on the complex racial formations that emerged in multiethnic societies in the postmodern era and the ways marginalized racial or ethnic communities responded to racial projects advanced by hegemonic groups in these societies. Questions that fall under the scope of this issue include: How do disempowered communities communicate and display modes of resistance? How do minoritized and multiracial people navigate notions of their identity? How do marginalized individuals and groups challenge racialized constructions of authenticity? And to what effect do these methods of resistance have on destabilizing formal and informal systems of power? The editors especially welcome submissions from scholars working in interdisciplinary fields that engage with ethnic studies, mixed race studies, Black studies, Asian American studies, Chicana studies, and critical refugee studies.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
