Tracing Roots, Shaping Futures: The History of Social Movements and Perspectives (Feminist, Indigenous, Masculinity, Political, Human Rights and Social Policy), Experiential Community Development, Resilience and Social and Gender Justice

Message from the Guest Editors

Our primary aim with this initiative is to deepen our understanding of and critically unpack how social and cultural histories have shaped the evolution of socio-political movements and experiential community development. We seek to trace critical milestones in the genealogical history of these practices, identifying their role in education and their importance and applications in the journey of social change. We further want to understand the transformative potential of these approaches in addressing systemic inequities and promoting social justice. Comparative analyses are encouraged, offering insights into how variations in genealogical contexts influence a wide range of interdisciplinary practices across different societies and countries. Further, we want to invite contributions of novel approaches to experiential community development, equipping practitioners and scholars with strategies to address contemporary social challenges.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
