

Special Issue

Critical Settler Family History

Message from the Guest Editor

The Special Issue follows the lines of inquiry established by Christine Sleeter's arguments for 'critical family history', applying these to the particular locations and experiences of settler colonial families. Critical settler family history brings together the genealogical work of family history and critical scholarship, centring on the lives of individual settler families to illuminate the structures, processes and power relations of settler colonial societies. Such explorations of family and social histories may reflect on the past to consider the question of settler descendant identities and social locations in the present and responsibilities towards a decolonial future. Critical settler family history is an inter-disciplinary field and submissions are welcome from scholars across the social sciences and humanities. About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
