

Special Issue

Identity Politics and Welfare Nationalism

Message from the Guest Editor

COVID-19 also represents a breaching edge that exposes assumptions and taken-for-granted practices regarding citizens' relations with national institutions. It is at these breaching edges that otherwise non-spoken beliefs are voiced. The state's nationalist reproduction practices occur, among others, when people pay their taxes, contributing thereby to the maintenance of social security systems, as well as when they receive free health assistance or unemployment benefits from welfare systems. This Special Issue on "Identity Politics and Welfare Nationalism" welcomes comparative articles that consider the differences among types of welfare states, as well as case studies. Qualitative and quantitative contributions are equally welcome, focusing either on the elite, on the one hand, or citizens, on the other, as well as the connections between them. Articles considering the effects of COVID-19 are of particular interest.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
