

Special Issue

Poverty, Welfare and the Family in C18th and 19th Britain

Message from the Guest Editors

This special issue brings together current work on poverty, welfare and the family in C18th and 19th Britain. More than this, it aims to draw together several disparate themes which have the potential to shape the historiography in new directions. In particular, we are interested in commonalities and differences across the British Isles, in personalities and places in relation to welfare regimes, and in new sources and methods which can offer new insights for historian and genealogists alike.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.
