About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Geographies is an open access, cross-disciplinary journal that covers the physical features of the earth and its atmosphere, also including the human dimension. The scope of this journal is extremely wide, from the study of the various components that make up our planet, to the tools used to conduct these studies, to the human impacts that affect us all. All of these issues can be addressed at a variety of spatial and temporal scales from global to local and from a single point in time through eons. Geographies promotes a quest for knowledge and to finding solutions to many of our most pressing and timely issues to benefit our world.
