

Special Issue

Oncology Care and Research in the Elderly

Message from the Guest Editor

The cancer burden continues to rise globally, especially in the elderly, as incidence rates increase with age for most cancers. According to the World Health Organization, over 14 million new cancer cases were diagnosed worldwide in 2012, and the number of new cases is expected to rise by about 70% over the next two decades. Although many cancer prevention interventions have been implemented, many older people still engage in cancer-related risky behaviors and do not take cancer preventive measures as recommended. This Special Issue welcomes submissions that focus on identifying personal, social and environmental factors in changing cancer-related risky behaviors, promoting cancer preventive measures, raising awareness of cancer symptoms and supporting caregiving in cancer, and develop and test evidence-based interventions to inform the best practice of prevention and supportive care in cancer among older adults. It is hope that this Special Issue will advance our understanding of cancer prevention and care in older adults and help identify effective strategies to reduce the cancer burden and promote better quality care. ## About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Our new journal is launched to serve geriatrics specialists and colleagues from other disciplines as an interface between theory and clinical practice. Pushing the boundaries of the discipline, I kindly invite you to consider publishing your current work in Geriatrics. We have chosen the format of an open access journal to provide all interested parties with a platform for their basic research and health care studies as well. For details on the submission process or any other matter, please visit the journal website. I hope to handle your contribution to Geriatrics soon to publish innovative, relevant, thought provoking ideas.
