Message from the Guest Editor

Dear colleagues:

Children are exposed to multiple factors that can affect or alter their state of health. Schools are centers where children spend many hours every day during the week, so it is important to analyze or study what can be done in the schools to maintain or improve the health of children.

This is a Review Special Issue for Section “School Health” in Healthcare. Any research that can help to understand the importance of school on children’s health is welcome to be included in this section.
