With a focus on healthcare provision by professionals, this Special Issue invites contributions that reflect on the impacts of both inclusive LGBTQI+ healthcare practices on one hand, and of healthcare practices that (re)produce inequalities based on hetero/cisnormative patterns on the other. With this emphasis on the provision of healthcare in mind, we are particularly interested in papers that explore one or more of the following topics:

- Ageing and healthcare provision for LGBTQI+ elders;
- The impact of anti-gender and anti-sexuality movements in the health sector;
- Backlash and failure in LGBTQI+ healthcare provision;
- Challenges faced by LGBTQI+ health professionals;
- Good practices in LGBTQI+ healthcare provision;
- Healthcare provision for trans, intersex, and non-binary patients;
- Healthcare provision for lesbian and bisexual women;
- Healthcare provision for gay and bisexual men;
- Hetero/cisnormativity in medical school curricula;
- LGBTQI+ healthcare provision over the lifespan, including children and youth;
- Policies for a more inclusive healthcare provision;
- Practices of medicalization and depathologization of LGBTQI+ people;
- Trans reproductive medicine.
