Real-Life Advances in Chronic Kidney Disease

Message from the Guest Editors

We are pleased to invite you to submit a paper based on real-life experiences with chronic kidney disease (CKD) to our Special Issue. This Special Issue aims to focus on real-life data, which should support the data retrieved from randomized clinical trials. Real-life analysis allows us to generate hypotheses, highlight relevant clinical questions, suggest practice diagnostic or management advances, conduct surveys, and carry out drug surveillance. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome to be submitted, as well as brief reports/surveys, commentary about the socioeconomic burden of chronic care, and systematic reviews of observational studies. Research areas may include, but are not limited to, the following: dialysis advances, domiciliary management, electrolyte disorders and complications related to them, management of CKD, quality of life, socioeconomic evaluation, and telemedicine in CKD. Furthermore, papers about nursing topics will be well received, as they will fit within our scope of promoting nursing research, which we consider relevant in clinical practice. We look forward to receiving your contributions.
