Fall Prevention and Geriatric Nursing—2nd Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

Following the success of the first edition of the Special Issue on “Fall Prevention and Geriatric Nursing” (https://www.mdpi.com/journal/healthcare/special_issues/16UV7F2423), we have decided to move forward with a second edition. Falls and the risk of falls, while formally classified as nursing diagnoses, represent a major public health concern affecting older adults, their families, and health systems, which are increasingly challenged to address and mitigate their impact. The prevention of falls, the management of fall-related injuries, and rehabilitation following fractures require an interdisciplinary and intersectoral approach that extends beyond the healthcare domain. These efforts encompass not only clinical interventions, but also individual behaviours and practices, as well as the planning, construction, and adaptation of age-friendly environments and urban spaces that promote safe mobility by reducing physical barriers and environmental hazards.
