The 10th Anniversary of Healthcare—Quality of Life of Older People with Disability in the Community

Message from the Guest Editor

With the growing aging population worldwide, the number of older people living with a disability will increase. Support from health and welfare professionals may be required. Community care aims at maintaining or increasing quality of life. Disability is associated with a lower quality of life in older people. Therefore, it is important that we gain more knowledge about the contribution of community care to the quality of life of older people with a disability, mental and/or physical. This Special Issue of the Community Care Section of Healthcare seeks commentaries, original research, short reports, and reviews on the quality of life of older people with a disability in the community. Contributions based on both quantitative and qualitative research can be submitted.
