Cancer Patients: How to Improve Quality of Life?

Message from the Guest Editor

Over the last two decades, cancer patients live longer thanks to integrated and consequent therapies but side effects related to cancer itself and treatments can cause disability, functional decline and progressive reduction of quality of life. Rehabilitation strategies are crucial yet many patients miss this opportunity. This Special Issue aims to focus some significant topics in adult and child cancer patients of both sexes from developed countries. I am inviting you to contribute to this issue to help give a better future to the growing population of cancer patients.
