Nursing Contributions to Improve Healthcare Outcomes

Message from the Guest Editor

Nurses are the key to providing safer, more effective care and to achieving better outcomes for patients. In this Special Issue, we plan to publish their contributions from the field of nursing that can improve the healthcare outcomes of the population and advance nursing knowledge, leadership and professional competences. Those contributions may come from implementation and pre-implementation interventions, applied research, educational interventions, innovation initiatives and management strategies and should be focused on providing person-centred care that respects the patient's experience, culture, values, needs and preferences in the planning, coordination and delivery of care. These objectives should complement better use of resources, the lowering of costs, and improvements in efficiency, satisfaction and care excellence.
