

Special Issue

Recent Advances in Otolaryngology

Message from the Guest Editors

Otolaryngology deals with disorders of the ears, nose, paranasal sinuses, pharynx, larynx, salivary glands, and oral cavity, but also hearing and balance problems, sleep disorders, and allergies. This Special Issue is dedicated to otolaryngologists, head and neck surgeons, audiologists, and phoniatrists, but also radiologists, pathomorphologists, and facio-maxillofacial surgeons dealing with disorders of the head and neck. Our goal is to present the latest discoveries in the diagnosis and treatment of ENT diseases. We want to expand the existing knowledge with new discoveries and open discussion on topics that have not yet been sufficiently studied. We are interested in original research papers and in up-to-date systematic reviews or meta-analyses and reports on new technological developments.
