Research and Survey on Mental Health of Children and Adolescents

Message from the Guest Editor

Recently, particularly after the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, increased attention has been paid to mental health, particularly that of children and adolescents. Awareness of these issues is already growing, and, thanks to the media and social networks, children and adolescents can research mental health issues, using self-monitoring strategies which will encourage them to seek help. In the wake of the global pandemic, we live in a world marked by conflict, violence, and uncertainties, and it is increasingly important to investigate variables related to the mental health of children and adolescents, considering all aspects of their lives, investigating and using multiple methods, respondents, and contexts. We welcome researchers from various fields involved in researching the mental health of children and adolescents to contribute to this Special Issue.
