

Special Issue

Smart Medicine for Older Adults

Message from the Guest Editor

The Institute for Successful Longevity at Florida State University, in collaboration with Healthcare, is pleased to announce a Special Issue on “Smart Medicine for Older Adults”. This Special Issue aims to explore innovative research and developments in the application of smart medicine to enhance the health and well-being of older adults. Aging populations are increasing globally, presenting unique challenges and opportunities for healthcare. Smart medicine, encompassing advanced technologies such as artificial intelligence (AI), machine learning, data analytics, and digital health solutions, holds significant promise in addressing these challenges. This Special Issue seeks to highlight cutting-edge research and practical applications that leverage these technologies to improve healthcare outcomes, promote independence, and enhance the quality of life for older adults.
