Quality of Life and Health Promotion in Chronic Illness or Critical Medical Conditions: Implications for Integrated Health Care Delivery

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue seeks to address the impact of chronic disease or critical medical conditions across an individual's lifespan. The goal is to bring together researchers addressing quality of life and health promotion in chronic illness in order to inform highquality integrated care programs to facilitate adaptation and treatment in patients, families and caregivers. The current Special Issue welcomes research papers in the area of clinical health informed by all disciplines including, but not limited to, psychology, public health sciences, behavioral medicine, epidemiology, family therapy, and nursing, addressing patients, couples, families and caregivers. Research based on the integration between primary care and secondary care as well as between health care and community care are particularly welcome.
