

Topical Collection

Health Economics & Finance and Global Public Health

Message from the Collection Editor

The aim of this Special Issue is to help disseminate innovative scholarship and strategies to advance global health, with a particular focus on health economics and finance and their far-reaching ramifications. Original research, reviews, perspectives, and research notes on any topic relevant to global health are welcome. Multidisciplinary manuscripts related to all aspects of health economics & finance and global health are significant, and those relating to the association of the Global Burden of Disease (GBD) and non-communicable diseases are also eligible to be considered. Additionally, manuscripts on health equity, global health security, implementation research, social determinants of health, population health, and other urgent and neglected global health issues are welcome.
