Health in Prison

Message from the Guest Editors

The journal Healthcare is launching a Special Issue entitled “Health in Prison”, intending to gather accurate and up-to-date scientific information on all aspects of this complex topic, collecting original investigations, case series and case reports, and reviews in all branches of medicine, clinical and forensic toxicology, pharmacology, psychiatry, rehabilitation, forensic medicine, forensic pathology, and criminology.

This Special Issue aims mainly to provide an overview of the research paths on health in prisons, including parietal issues regarding prisoners’ health verification when requested by the judiciary, in relation to each individual country’s specific rules.

Similar submissions dealing with clinical and forensic aspects of other sciences and the social sciences are also welcome, as are submissions dealing with scientifically sound emerging science disciplines.
