

Special Issue

Global Perspectives on Nursing and Palliative Care for Cancer Survivors

Message from the Guest Editors

This special edition highlights the importance of nursing care for cancer survivors in palliative care. Some two topics that can be addressed included:

- Patient-centered approach: discuss the importance of a patient-centered approach to patient care in cancer survivors in palliative care, considering their individual needs and preferences;
- Management of patients and symptoms: explore disease strategies for effectively managing patients and symptoms associated with cancer in palliative care survivors, including complementary and alternative therapies;
- Emotional support: examining the nurse's role in providing emotional support to cancer survivors, including identifying and managing anxiety, depression, and fear of recurrence;
- Promotion of self-care: discuss strategies to enable cancer survivors in palliative care to assume an active role in their self-care, promoting independence and quality of life;
- End-of-life: addressing the importance of nursing in providing compassionate and supportive care during the end-of-life phase of cancer survivors in palliative care and supporting families in this delicate moment.
