Perspectives on Plastic, Reconstructive and Hand Surgery

Message from the Guest Editors

The field of plastic, reconstructive and hand surgery is hugely diverse. Innovations and the ongoing development of new techniques form the core of our discipline and drive the pursuit of excellent patient care. While basic science puts forth novel ideas, translating them into the clinical setting and ensuring their safety after market approval are of equal importance. In this Special Issue, we would therefore like to address the steps involved in the development of such innovations and present the latest advances in the diverse field of plastic, reconstructive and hand surgery—from bench to bedside. We look forward to receiving your contributions.
