Innovations in Primary and Community Care for Rehabilitation

Message from the Guest Editors

In the global context, primary care and community-based rehabilitation are becoming an important component in the healthcare delivery model. These types of services can reduce hospital admission and contribute to substantial savings in healthcare costs in all countries. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Systematic reviews and meta-analyses of primary care and/or community-based projects for special populations;
- Effects of primary care or community-based projects on physical functions or well-being for people with chronic diseases, or specific disorders (e.g., musculoskeletal, cardiorespiratory or neurological) with objective outcome measures such as pain, physical function and/or mental health status, insomnia or sleep health;
- Cross-sectional studies evaluating the health status or quality of life of special populations.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
