

Special Issue

Urgent and Acute Prehospital Care

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue seeks to illuminate the breadth and sophistication of clinical care provided to patients before their access to and in partnership with primary, secondary, and tertiary care services. The Special Issue will feature original research, reviews, and short reports reflecting the diversity of prehospital urgent and acute care provided by healthcare providers with a range of professional backgrounds. Of particular interest would be papers in, but not limited to, the areas of assessment and management of patients in the prehospital phase of care across the age span from birth to older age, during pregnancy, those with mental health needs, and vulnerable individuals. Papers may consider emergency and acute care, as well as urgent care interventions, be that trauma, surgical, medical or mental health. We would also be interested in papers considering nonclinical aspects of prehospital care such as multi-professional working, the education of prehospital clinicians, and legal aspects of prehospital practice.
