

Special Issue

Advances and Challenges in the Labour Markets for Healthcare Professionals

Message from the Guest Editors

In many countries, there is a shortage of care professionals (e.g., physicians and nurses). In this Special Issue, we would like to assemble a complete overview of the problems, analyses and potential solutions for this shortage in different countries. We invite contributions that address any issue related to shortages of care professionals. In particular, we are interested in studies on the evaluation of (successful) interventions to reduce shortages. These could relate to wages, work conditions, competition with other economic sectors, job substitution, skilling and de-skilling jobs to solve labour shortages.
