

Special Issue

Preventative Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

Healthcare systems around the world have long advocated for improved health practices to their patients. Against this backdrop, this Special Issue has been launched with the aim to compile research and review articles in various healthcare disciplines that address the prevention of age-related, acute, and chronic disease states. As the journal is multidisciplinary in nature, authors are requested to describe the foundation of the disease state to benefit healthcare professionals from different fields who will read your article.
