

Special Issue

Turn to the East: Afrofuturism 2.0, African Futurism and Sinofuturism in Speculative Theory, Criticism and Practice

Message from the Guest Editor

This special issue explores non-Western futuristic movements and their chronopolitics—Afrofuturism 2.0, African Futurism, and Sinofuturism—as frameworks for decolonizing narratives of technology, culture, and power. While Afrofuturism interrogates Black diasporic futures through African cosmologies and resistance to colonialism, Sinofuturism examines China's rapid technological ascendance as a form of "distributed artificial intelligence" embedded in globalized labor and cultural flows. Both movements challenge Eurocentric visions of progress, offering radical alternatives to hegemonic futurisms. Afrofuturism re-centers agency through mytho-forms, philosophy, and alternate histories; African Futurism explores the agency and realities of people on the African continent; and Sinofuturism seeks to reframe China's technological rise as collective post-human agency. Chronopolitics examines how both movements manipulate time—Afrofuturism via "revisionist histories" and Sinofuturism through accelerating industrial timelines [...]

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

We welcome contributions that address fundamental issues in the Humanities from any meaningful perspective, combining past and present concerns in order to blaze a path toward the future. Interdisciplinary approaches are particularly welcome. All submissions will be critically reviewed by peers, aiming for the highest possible scholarly level. Being an online journal, the published papers will reach their desired audiences faster, more reliably, and much more easily than traditional print versions, while upholding the same, if not even higher, scholarly standards.
