Message from the Guest Editors

On behalf of the International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health, we are organizing a Special Issue on food safety and nutrition, focusing on the latest contributions on natural food additives, ingredients, and flavorings. The International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health is a peer-reviewed scientific journal that publishes manuscripts in the interdisciplinary area of environmental health sciences and public health. As the relationship between health and food additives comes under increasing scrutiny, there is a growing desire for foods that use natural ingredients and additives rather than synthetic ones. The focus of this Special Issue is on legislative issues concerning natural food additives and ingredients, as well as the variety of natural food additives and ingredients available and their applications in multiple product sectors.
