

Special Issue

Food Science and Human Nutrition

Message from the Guest Editors

We are glad to present this Special Issue on Food Science and Nutrition in the International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health. This Special Issue aims to publish novel and original research on the conjunction between food science and nutrition, considering in vitro, in vivo, and clinical studies with a major focus on the impact and interaction of the food matrix in nutrition. We welcome contributions in the form of research articles, reviews (literature reviews, mini-reviews, or systematic reviews), or meta-analyses considering topics such as:

- Molecular mechanisms of food components within a food matrix.
- Bioaccessibility, bioavailability, and bioactivity of food components and their relationship with nutrition.
- Impact of food components in a food matrix in models of disease.
- The effect of food technologies on the transformation of food components and their impact on nutrition.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Addressing the environmental and public health challenges requires engagement and collaboration among clinicians and public health researchers. Scientific discoveries and advances in this research field play a critical role in providing a rational basis for informed decision-making toward control and prevention of human diseases, especially the illnesses that are induced from environmental exposure to health hazards.

IJERPH provides a forum for discussion of discoveries and knowledge in these multidisciplinary fields. Please consider publishing your research in this high quality peer-reviewed journal.
