New Trends in Health Status and Care Needs Among Older Adults

Message from the Guest Editors

The Special Issue “New Trends in Health Status and Care Needs Among Older Adults” aims to bring together cutting-edge research that examines emerging patterns and determinants of health and care needs in later life. We welcome original research, reviews, and perspectives that explore health trajectories, care utilization, unmet needs, and the roles of social and cultural contexts, technological innovations, and policies. Comparative and longitudinal studies that inform public health practice and policy are particularly encouraged.

Addressing the environmental and public health challenges requires engagement and collaboration among clinicians and public health researchers. Scientific discoveries and advances in this research field play a critical role in providing a rational basis for informed decision-making toward control and prevention of human diseases, especially the illnesses that are induced from environmental exposure to health hazards.

IJERPH provides a forum for discussion of discoveries and knowledge in these multidisciplinary fields. Please consider publishing your research in this high quality peer-reviewed journal.
