Human Papillomavirus (HPV) Prevention and Interventions Among Vulnerable Populations: Overcoming Roadblocks to HPV Elimination

Message from the Guest Editor

We welcome papers that address topics that ultimately foster health equity and address long-standing barriers for the populations most at risk, such as community-tailored approaches that improve vaccine access and uptake, enhanced access to screening and treatment, the mitigation of healthcare challenges and logistics, and social determinants of health such as misinformation and stigma, for this Special Issue, “Human Papillomavirus (HPV) Prevention and Interventions Among Vulnerable Populations: Overcoming Roadblocks to HPV Elimination”.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Addressing the environmental and public health challenges requires engagement and collaboration among clinicians and public health researchers. Scientific discoveries and advances in this research field play a critical role in providing a rational basis for informed decision-making toward control and prevention of human diseases, especially the illnesses that are induced from environmental exposure to health hazards.

IJERPH provides a forum for discussion of discoveries and knowledge in these multidisciplinary fields. Please consider publishing your research in this high quality peer-reviewed journal.
