Mental Disorders and Coping Strategies in COVID-19

Message from the Guest Editors

Since the beginning of the pandemic, studies on the mental state of the population have been conducted across the world. Different target groups have experienced difficulties in coping with the pandemic. This Special Issue aims to collate manuscripts that study the mental state of different groups, as well as strategies that have been used to cope with the emerging mental disorders. Original research, systematic reviews, meta-analysis, case reports, brief research reports, and opinion pieces are all welcome. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Mental disorders.
- Mental health.
- Coping strategies.
- Psychological impact.
- COVID-19.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Addressing the environmental and public health challenges requires engagement and collaboration among clinicians and public health researchers. Scientific discoveries and advances in this research field play a critical role in providing a rational basis for informed decision-making toward control and prevention of human diseases, especially the illnesses that are induced from environmental exposure to health hazards.

IJERPH provides a forum for discussion of discoveries and knowledge in these multidisciplinary fields. Please consider publishing your research in this high quality peer-reviewed journal.
