

Special Issue

Social Determinants, Behavioral and Lifestyle Choices, and Health Disparities of Older Adults

Message from the Guest Editors

We are organizing a Special Issue on “Social Determinants, Behavioral and Lifestyle Choices, and Health Disparities of Older Adults” in the International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health. The venue is a peer-reviewed scientific journal that publishes articles and communications in the interdisciplinary area of environmental health sciences and public health. For detailed information on the journal, we refer you to

<https://www.mdpi.com/journal/ijerph>. We encourage empirical research addressing multiple levels, from individual behaviors to structural factors related to various health outcomes and health disparities among older adults in the USA or internationally, using quantitative, qualitative, or mixed methods. This research may speak to the following topics (but not limited to these):

- Multiple levels of factors related to health, including individual health behaviors to social, economic, and physical conditions
- Relationships among social determinants, neighborhoods, and health
- The role of neighborhoods or community environment in health equity or health disparities

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Addressing the environmental and public health challenges requires engagement and collaboration among clinicians and public health researchers. Scientific discoveries and advances in this research field play a critical role in providing a rational basis for informed decision-making toward control and prevention of human diseases, especially the illnesses that are induced from environmental exposure to health hazards.

IJERPH provides a forum for discussion of discoveries and knowledge in these multidisciplinary fields. Please consider publishing your research in this high quality peer-reviewed journal.
