Climate Finance and Energy Transition

Message from the Guest Editor

It is my pleasure to present the Special Issue, "Climate Finance and Energy Transition". Climate change requires a permanent transition toward sustainable energies. This, in turn, implies reshaping the investments and structure of both primary energy markets and energy vector markets. There are several challenges that energy transition poses to investments and financial decisions in addition to energy commodities and vectors. The Special Issue aims at attracting studies that focus on those challenges that lie at the intersection between financial markets analysis, the evaluation of investments, price formation of energy commodities and its evolution, and energy transition. Submissions to this Special Issue should be accounts of studies focusing on i) encompassing environmental and intergenerational externalities in economic decision making; ii) evaluating the direct and indirect effects of climate change on commodity and asset risks; iii) coordinating short- and long-term investment decisions under climate uncertainty; ...

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I'm thrilled to take the leadership reins of the International Journal of Financial Studies and welcome the opportunity to make it one of the vanguard open-source scientific journals in our field. I eagerly look forward to working with the journal editorial team in building upon the quality instilled by my predecessor to develop the title further and broaden the appeal to other new finance research areas while keeping our core a high-quality finance journal that serves and highly values the scientific community, readers and authors alike. IJFS aims to publish high-quality manuscripts in both theoretical and empirical finance spanning all the major research areas in the field. It aims to provide an outlet for original finance scholarly research that promotes interaction among finance scholars and practitioners and bridges the divide that can exist between them.
